I wanted to thank you again for being such an integral part of our Police Commanders Course faculty. The message you deliver provides our leadership folks with much needed tools as they face the challenges of leading a diverse law enforcement force at each of our installations across the Marine Corps. Our success in training and education is due in large part to your participation.

I want to extend the most heart-felt thank you to you for your training Friday. Several teachers are very excited about trying your techniques with some students they feel they have no influence over. Your techniques give us hope with the most challenging students.

Those who sat under your leadership were inspired, affirmed, and challenged. They returned to their place of service with new understandings, ideas for implementation, and resources as they minister to children and their families. Thank you for sharing your talent, insight and time with us.

You are not only a masterful speaker with a quiet winsome way, Cynthia, but your message is one that parents and teachers all over the world long to hear.

—Sandy Smith

It amazes me how well she knows teenagers and exactly how we think and act and feel. She made wonderful suggestions that make sense and will work as long as parents stay calm and not point their fingers and make us do it. Thank you very much and I plan to share these suggestions with my mom—hopefully it will improve our relationship.
